INTRODUCTION FROM DR. WILLIAM J. ROTHWELL

In challenging economic times, organizations have a pressing need to manage change. But there is more than one effective way to do that. One approach is so-called “top down” change in which change is engineered using a standardized method. A second approach is so-called “bottom up” change in which individuals are polled about what organizational problems they perceive and how best to solve them. A third approach identifies and builds on strengths rather than focusing on problem-solving. What are these approaches? How can they most effectively be used? What is best practice in managing change? This seminar addresses these, and other, important questions about managing change, organization development (OD) and appreciative inquiry (AI).

Over the course of the 3-day workshop we will focus on key success factors plus the latest practices and developments in the area of Change Management OD and AI.

I will also be sharing with you many contemporary tools and technologies that you will be able to put to practical use right away.

I will bring you to the cutting edge of the profession and enable you to use effective Change Management OD and AI to create competitive advantage for your organization which is sustainable through good and challenging economic times.

I look forward to working with you at this upcoming program. There is so much to learn and to do to achieve much greater results and I would like to take you on this exciting journey with me and other leaders.

Sincerely yours,

Dr. William J. Rothwell
Professor
